TODAY'S PROGRAM

Christopher A. DeGeorge, DC

Dr. DeGeorge practices with the Upper Cervical Health Centers of America, and is known as an "Upper Cervical Chiropractor." OK. So what is "upper cervical?" It is a self-proclaimed rapidly growing form of chiropractic that focuses on the intimate relationship between the first two bones in the neck (called the upper cervical spine) and the brain stem (a vital portion of the nervous system). This relationship is termed essential to the body's ability to preserve and/or restore health.

Chris DeGeorge

Theory says that for every effect or symptom, either physical or mental, there is a cause. Upper cervical doctors focus on locating and correcting interference to the nervous system that may be this cause. Correcting such interference can allow the body to heal itself without the help of potentially harmful drugs or surgery.

Thanks to Dr. DeGeorge for an interesting and provocative discussion
